

On September 13, 2025, eight enthusiastic hikers set out to explore the Turtle's Back: Di, Elia, Carolyn, Kari, Patrick, Arron, Pauline, and Steffany. The day began under a thick blanket of fog, setting a mysterious tone as participants drove to the park. When we reached the summit, visibility was still low, so we enjoyed our lunch surrounded by mist.

Afterward, we decided to climb the lookout tower once more—and were rewarded for our patience! The fog had lifted, revealing stunning views in every direction. The descent offered its own surprise: a curious cow greeted us along the way.

It was a fun and memorable day full of changing weather, good company, and great scenery.
