

Brandon Hills Hike October 28, 2023

Just before 10am Diane, Olwen and James hit the trails at the Brandon Hills. It was a small group so I knew there was not a big risk of losing a participant on the trail. The temperature was a crisp minus 8° as we headed east along the North Face Trail. There was a bit of a wind until we got tucked into the trees along Blister Trail. Then we headed south along One-Way Trail and Sidewinder Trail to the Burning Bush bench for a break.

The view of the valley was great, and enjoyable even with the wind coming across the fields to the south.

I was able to gather everyone together for a group photo before we headed off west down Burning Bush Trail.

Soon we crossed the ski trails and were heading back to the trailhead on Fire Ant Trail.

Unfortunately we did not encounter any wildlife along the trails.

After just over 2 hours we were back at the vehicle and heading home down some icy roads, still invigorated from the fresh crisp air.
